SUMMARY 25X1D 25X1D 25X1D

Polotsk Army Barracks (Figure 1) is located one kilometer (km) north of Polotsk (55-29N 028-48E). A former rail line 0.5 km west of the installation has been dismantled and the rail bed is now used as a road. All-weather secondary roads provide access to Polotsk. Direct secondary roads connect this area with Polotsk Army Barracks and Maneuver Area (AL-3), one km north.

This installation covers approximately 410 acres and contains two administrative buildings, four barracks, eight large storage buildings, 20 support buildings, one secured ammunition storage building, and two small arms firing ranges (Figures 2 and 3).

The area is covered by [REDACTED] TALENT photography and 8 KEYHOLE missions between [REDACTED]. Comparative analysis reveals a consistent level of light activity between [REDACTED].

[REDACTED] Significant changes observed are the removal of two large storage buildings and the addition of two support buildings.

DESCRIPTION OF INSTALLATION 25X1D

25X1D

Railroad Service

A rail line 0.5 km west of the installation has been dismantled, and the rail bed is now used as a road.

Road Service

All-weather secondary roads provide access to the primary highway in Polotsk.

Administrative and Troop Housing Area

Area D (Figure 3) has one administrative building, two U-shaped multistory barracks, one multistory barracks, and 12 support buildings. Two small support buildings have been added since [REDACTED].

General Storage Area

Area E has eight large storage buildings, one multistory barracks, one administrative building, and five support buildings. Two large storage buildings have been removed since [REDACTED].

Ammunition Storage Area

Area F has one 150- by 50-foot ammunition storage building located in a small secured area.

Equipment Storage/Maintenance Area

Area J has three 150- by 50-foot vehicle sheds, two 140- by 50-foot vehicle sheds, and three support buildings. Scarring and snow plowing indicate the area is occupied.

Small Arms Firing Ranges

Area L has one 750- by 50-foot and one 300- by 100-foot small arms firing range. Little or no activity is observed at these ranges.
